A MODERN SAMSON.

IRON MUSCLES HAS THIS YOUNG NEW YORKER.

Has Never Trained, Smokes Cigarettes Constantly, Yet Performs Feats Which Are Wonderful in the Extreme.

STRONGEST OF THE STRONG.

At this time when the "modern Hercules" and the "modern Samson," and more "iron men" than one can count are before the public, it is both interesting and novel to find a modest, beardless boy of 18 years, performing feats of strength that make many of the alleged wonders wonder what will appear next in the line of prodigies, says the New York Sun. Men who speak from authority say that it is only a question of time and proper care when young Emil Jarow will give performances that will actually cause the new found Samson to appear as helpless as the real Samson when he was shorn of his hair by Delilah. This boy has lately been giving performances in bar rooms and before clubs in the upper end of town. He has had neither manager nor press agent, but he has attracted the attention of a dozen or more athletes who agree that he is not only the strongest boy of his years ever seen in this country, but is entitled to be ranked among the strongest of strong men. What he will do when his strength is fully developed, in from four to ten years, is a matter of prophecy.

The other evening a Sun reporter was one of a group of six men who saw this youngster's prowess. It was in an up town saloon. The boy dropped in casually and leaned against the bar, and attracted no special notice. There were no signs of unusual strength in his appearance. He is 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 132 pounds. His chest is broad and his legs are well set, though not heavy. His neck is rather long and is not thick, as is common with prize fighters and athletes. The muscles of his arms do not bulge out of the sleeves of his coat, and the buttons do not drop from his vest when he draws a long breath. In his rough dress he looked like one of a common class of bar room loungers. His countenance wore a pale and unhealthy look, doubtless the result of his persistent habit of smoking cigarettes.

"Jarow, can't you show a few tricks to these gentlemen?" asked the bartender.

"What kind of tricks?" asked some one.

"Oh, different feats of strength. That is our strong boy," was the answer.

A general laugh followed when the men looked for indications of strength. The proprietor, a man weighing 240 pounds, sat down in an oak chair weighing 20 pounds, and said to the boy:

"Just rise me up for a starter."

The spectators gathered in a semi-circle, while the boy lit another cigarette and smiled. He stepped quickly over to the chair, took hold of one of the rounds with his right hand and lifted the chair and man off the floor.

There was less laughing and more interest among the spectators. They wanted to see the boy's muscles, and he stripped off his shirt. Then they saw a remarkable development of the arms and chest. The boy raised his right arm, and the muscles stood out in great twists and knots that curved and played into changing lines. He held his arm out straight. "See if you can bend it, my two of you," he said.

Two of the heaviest and strongest of the spectators threw their entire weight upon the extended arm. It withstood their efforts like a bar of steel. The left arm is quite as well developed and as strong as the right. The biceps measure 14 inches. The boy has remarkable power of grip, as is shown by one of his favorite feats, that of tearing a pack of cards with one motion. He also piles five chairs, weighing 20 pounds each, on another chair, which he grasps by the lower round with his hand turned upward. Slowly he lifts the pile from the floor and raises it above his head without changing the position of his hand. Something of the strength required for this feat may be understood by the person who will try to lift one chair, even a light one, from the floor in the manner described.

Jarow expects that after awhile his chest development will permit him to do the "carrying feats," as he calls the performance of Sandow when he holds two horses or a piano and orchestra on his chest. His chest now measures 33 inches. When it is expanded 31 inches it looks like the top of a Saratoga trunk. He has not yet tried the strength of his chest by serious tests, but has given nearly all of his trials with his arms. He lifts 800 pounds, dead weight, without a harness. He has never used a harness or any of the trappings which professional strong men sometimes employ to save their muscles and deceive the public. He is satisfied to give exhibitions in saloons and pick up a dollar or two of an evening to buy a bed, a cheap meal and plenty of cigarettes.

One thing that he does is to write his name, not after the methods taught in writing schools, but in an entirely original way. He ties a 40 pound dumb bell to the wrist of his right hand, and writes his name on the wall with more speed than most people can write on a table. It is a matter of doubt whether this feat can be done by more than two of the famous strong men of the day.

After the spectators had seen Jarow perform several feats, the bartender rolled an empty beer keg of the size known as the quarter barrel, out on the floor. It weighed 110 pounds. Jarow reached down and placed his little finger under each of the iron bound rims. With this slender support alone he raised the keg squarely in front of him. He held it there for a minute, and then grasping it with both hands, raised the keg over his head sixteen times. He also lifted the keg from the floor to a chair with the fingers of his right hand. This is another performance that strong men do not care to try. There are many men traveling about with shows who can toss about heavy iron balls and lift enormous dumb bells, but when it comes to performing feats of strength with their fingers they are outclassed by this boy. One of his cleanest and most satisfactory performances was given one evening in the gymnasium of the Spalding literary club at 34 West 61 street. He picked up a 300 pound wooden "horse" from the floor and held it at arms' length from his body. The crack athlete of the club could barely move it.

A feature of this boy's strength is that it was not acquired, but born in him. It is the fashion nowadays for the Sandows and the Atlases to write pamphlets and newspaper syndicate letters on the art of becoming strong, and to give directions for following certain methods which they have employed to acquire strength. Each has his own way and gives his own experience. Jarow never learned any of these things, and he has no advice to give. So far back as he can remember he was the strongest boy of his years among his associates. When but five years old he could lift weights that could not be moved by boys ten years older. As he grew this strength increased in proportion to his years.

He never worked in a gymnasium for any length of time, and has never been instructed in athletic work. He has never studied the ways of strong men at their professional exhibitions, and has never had a lifting harness, because he never had enough money to buy one. He likes to show his strength when there is a little money in it for him, but his success has not increased his vanity to any appreciable extent. He is said to have a particular aversion to hard work. Last summer he was with Buffalo Bill's wild west show, when he was employed to carry for and clean the guns, and see that there was always a supply of glass balls for the long haired scout to break at his daily exhibitions. A few weeks ago a gentleman up town, who became interested in the boy's work, got a place for him at a club at Burton-on-the-Sound. He worked one day and threw up the job. If not picked up by a clever manager he will probably be found around the saloons of New York during the winter.

NEWSY NOTES GATHERED FROM VA-RIOUS SOURCES.

Train Fired Into—Cashier McDowell Not Heard From—Chap "Gold Dust"—Tornado in Louisiana, Etc.

HAPPENINGS HERE AND THERE.

No Tidings From Cashier McDowell. Cashier Joe McDowell, of the Estill county deposit bank, has not yet returned, and his protracted absence being somewhat vexed in mystery, especially when the cash on hand was found to be nil, the bank directors have commenced an investigation. The bank is a private institution, of $50,000 capital, 40 per cent. of which was paid up. There are notes due the bank amounting to about $17,000. There is due depositors about $17,000.

As to whether the bank owes other debts save one of $3,500 is not known, as it is reported the cashier had borrowed money in Louisville in the name of the bank and had only accounted for a part of such loans. His individual account shows a balance to his credit of about $700, but as the books had been very loosely kept it will be impossible to state with certainty the condition of affairs until a complete overhauling of the books is made. Cashier McDowell left Irvine on the 24th ult., saying he was going to Cincinnati to borrow money to relieve the bank of a temporary stringency; but as no tidings have been had of him doubt is as to whether he is still alive.

Shakespeare & Ohio Train Fired Into. As the C. & O. vestibuled F. V. train reached Wiley station on the night of the 2nd inst., bound for Louisville, engineer Kennedy and fireman Billy Madden were fired on by some one concealed in the bushes along the track. Three bullets entered the window of the cab near Kennedy's head. He did not stop the train.

It is believed that some one was trying to wreck the train. On Wednesday evening the same train was derailed by the rails spreading at the same point where the shots were fired, and Sunday night last the train ran into a lot of trees piled on the track by train wreckers. Two attempts have been made to wreck the train near Wiley station in the past year.

That the train robber is about is evidenced by the fact that a few nights ago at the Louisville Southern train reached Lawrenceburg three shots were fired into the cab. Detectives are at work trying to locate the miscreants. As usual the railroad officials were reticent and said that there was nothing in it.

Tornado in Louisiana.

Shreveport, La., and vicinity was visited by a disastrous storm on the 21st inst. The velocity of the wind was about 43 miles an hour, but in portions of Bossier parish it was much more severe. It is reported that hundreds of bales of cotton in the fields have been destroyed. Much loss has been sustained by the killing of stock by falling timber. Cabins, out-houses, gins, cribs and many residences have been blown away or overturned. Trees and fences also suffered, but as far as known nobody was killed, although several narrow escapes from death are reported.

Bought "Gold Dust" Cheap.

Meyer J. Cohen, a tailor at 78 Prince street, Boston, Mass., has reported to the police the loss of $6,500 by a clever swindler. Cohen through a friend made a deal with a stranger to purchase forty pounds of gold dust, alleged to have been secured in the Siberian mines, where the swindler said he had served sixteen years of a life sentence before he escaped. The value of the dust was said to be $10,000, but the swindler would take $6,500 for it. Cohen paid the money. The dust proved to be worthless.

Vote for John R. Hobbs.

Not knowing who the Democratic nominee for jailer of Wolfe county was, and not believing that our Campion correspondent would so impose on us as to vote for a man so infamous, we unwittingly in our issue of October 19th published a letter from him in which he made an attack on John R. Hobbs, the Democratic nominee for jailer of Wolfe county. Now, we deem it unnecessary to say that the Sentinel-Democrat, under its present management, is, and will ever be, Democratic—loyal to the candidates and principles of that party. For the error we were led into by publishing a communication attacking a Democratic nominee and opposing his election, we make a most abject apology, and advise all our Democratic friends in Wolfe county to vote the ticket straight. We have it from no less an authority than that able and true Democrat, Judge D. B. Redwine, that John R. Hobbs, though poor, is a straightforward, honorable man, a consistent Democrat, and in every way qualified for the position of jailer, and is worthy of, and should receive, the support of every Democrat in Wolfe county. In the future "Supple Jack's" letters will at once find their way to the wastebasket.

Democrats of Wolfe, vote for John R. Hobbs for jailer. We know he is worthy of your support, because Dave Redwine told us so.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat, 2d last.

The strange inconsistency of R. L. Athy, alias "Supple Jack," of Campton, is alarming. In a lurid letter published in the Gazette this week, he claims to be a never-dying Republican, and lauds the policy of that party to the skies. And in the same letter he tells that he has been writing "Democratic doctrine" to the Sentinel Democrat. The Gazette headlines the letter so as to make Athy a falsifier. A man that writes such contradictory letters and doctrines needs to be taught better manners. The S.-D. apologizes to its readers for publishing his letters. It was grossly deceived. The S.-D. does not want anyone to write a sentence, or a word, for its columns that is not strictly true.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat, 2d last.

INFATUATED WITH A MINISTER.

A Woman Perseutes in Her Persecutions of the Man She Loves.

Rev. Fitzgerald Parker, the handsome young pastor of the Dryades street Methodist church, New Orleans, La., is the victim of a peculiar persecution. It is the custom of the minister at the conclusion of the services to request all those who desire to become christians and lead a better life to come forward. Among those who arose to go to the altar was a lady giving her name as Mrs. A. D. Forbes. Turning to the lady, Mr. Parker said: "Now, madam, it is of you I wish to speak to the people. You may retire."

Instead of leaving the church, as requested, the lady resumed her seat, whereupon the minister said: "I have heard it remarked in several quarters that it is exceedingly strange that I do not receive into the church the lady who has just now, and frequently heretofore, presented herself at the altar for membership, and that I have repelled her from the holy sacrament. It therefore becomes my duty to the congregation to make some explanation, as the lady has, by her unusual behavior, attracted no little attention to herself. I have several times requested her, on coming to the altar, to desist, and once, in the presence of the officials of the church I have admonished her to discontinue this course, assuring her that I should be compelled to publicly repulse her if she persisted." This she has done, and while I do not lay any charge against the lady's character, I decline utterly to entertain her application for church membership, or to in any wise recognize her, as I am fully convinced the whole matter is dishonest. Of this I can amply satisfy any one that may require more than my simple assertion."

It is said that Mrs. Forbes is completely infatuated with the young preacher, and takes advantage of every opportunity to thrust her attentions upon him until life has almost become a burden.

Good's Sarsaparilla, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, and in this way positively cures catarrh.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

President Cleveland Designates Thursday, Nov. 29, as a Day to Be Observed.

The president has issued the following proclamation:

By the president of the United States of America: A proclamation:

The American people should gratefully render thanksgiving and praise to the Supreme Ruler of the universe, who has watched over them with kindness and fostering care during the year that has just passed; they should also with humility and faith supplicate the Father of all mercies for continued blessings according to their needs, and they should by deeds of charity seek the favor of the giver of every good and perfect gift.

Therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, the 29th day of November inst., as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, to be kept and observed by all the people of the land.

On that day let our ordinary work and business be suspended, and let us meet in our accustomed places of worship and give thanks to Almighty God for our preservation as a nation, for our immunity from disease and pestilence, for the harvests that have rewarded our husbandry, for a renewal of national prosperity, and for every advance in virtue and intelligence that has marked our growth as a people.

And with our thanksgiving let us pray that these blessings may be multiplied unto us that our national conscience may be quickened to a better recognition of the power and goodness of God, and that in our national life we may clearer see and closer follow the path of righteousness.

And in our places of worship and praise, as well as in the happy reunions of kindred and friends, on that day let us invoke divine approval by generously remembering the poor and needy. Surely He who has given us comfort and plenty will look upon our relief of the destitute and our ministrations of charity as proofs of the sincerity of our thanksgiving.

Witness my hand and the seal of the United States which I have caused to be hereunto affixed.

Done in the city of Washington on the first day of November, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and nineteenth.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the president: W. Q. GRESHAM, Secretary of State.

A BAD LOT.

The Sanctified Band on Trial at Accomac, Virginia.

The trial of the sanctified band of Chilcotteague Island was had at Accomac courthouse, Va., on the 2nd inst. The leaders of this fanatical gang stand indicted on the charge of being guilty of a conspiracy to arrange wives from their husbands and otherwise disturbing the peace and harmony of the people of Chilcotteague.

James H. Fletcher appeared for the commonwealth and Russell & Spady for the defense. A motion to quash the indictment was promptly overruled, and thirteen witnesses were examined, several of them women, for the prosecution. The courthouse was packed with people, and many were unable to gain admittance. The testimony was rare, rich and racy, the most of it being unfit for publication.

The substance of the testimony of the witnesses was that Lynch and Workman, leaders of the gang, had preached sanctification, persuading women to leave their un sanctified husbands and become the partners, or fellow workers of "sanctified men." Some of the witnesses told pathetic stories how their homes had been invaded and their divided wives alienated and taken from them, together with their little children. Lynch had told the women this was the only way to raise up a holy man. Sometimes the witnesses would make remarks or relate incidents that would make the courtroom shake with laughter, and then the story of some desolate home would moisten the eyes of the assemblage.

BY
GEN. O. O. HOWARD
COPYRIGHT, 1904

MY DEAR SIR: Permit me to couch this article in the form of a letter with a view to tell it somewhat of the charge of glory, since you ask me for "the most interesting personal adventure you (I) had during the war."

The "adventure" selected, which I think has never been published in its detail, occurred in the midst of Sherman's phenomenal Atlanta campaign, that campaign of more than one hundred days, where the most of his men were under fire every day, excepting about three days' rest after the confederates had declined battle near Cartersville, Ga., and crossed to the south side of the Etowah river. That was a delicious rest, memorable to me because Sherman had been brisquely and strongly defended my temperance habit, saying, "Let Howard alone, I want an officer who don't drink!" When the three days were ended, we pressed on to fight in succession the battles of New Hope Church, Dallas, Pickett's Mill, and the skirmishes about Pine Top, where Bishop took me his last fate.

In those engagements, with intermediate moves and counter moves, much time was consumed. After Pickett's death Johnston, the confederate general in command on June 10, 1864, fell back beyond a considerable stream, well named Jud creek, and stretched out his long line apparently parallel with the twin mountains, the Kenosaws.

Part of his right brigades had been but little, if any, changed in position. There was a weak point near the middle.

Our troops quickly catching sight of the moving confederates rushed forward, hoping to surprise them who were unprepared. I was following one of my brigades (Gen. Harrier's, of the Fourth corps). As I was emerging into an open space, Harrier by a rush ran over an entrenched line, "taking the defenders captive." To mark this event and place I will quote a few lines from my Century article:

"Just where the old lines joined the new (for Johnston's right wing was unchanged) I saw a fact, the like of which never elsewhere fell under my observation. Baird's division, in a comparatively open field, put forth a heavy skirmish line, which continued such a rapid fire of rifle as to keep down a corresponding hostile line behind its well-constructed trenches, while the picks and shovels behind the

The continuity of Gen. Sherman's strong line was broken. The wedge had entered the block and would soon be driven home. Stanley, Kirby and myself were mortified. Gen. Thomas and Sherman were worried lest Johnston should follow up his advantage, break down our center defenses and roll up in shameful defeat our lines in good earnest.

I told Gen. Thomas, under whose eye I was then commanding the Fourth corps, which was always directly breasting the enemy's intrenchments about their middle point: "To-morrow, general, I will retake that Bald Knob."

"All right, Gen. Howard, go ahead." What a comfort it was to nerve under a thoroughly good man, and one that could and did trust you. Parts of the two divisions, Stanley's and Thomas' John Wood's, were opposite the lost position. They each sent me a brigade, Col. Nodine's on the right and Gen. Kirby's on the left. Other troops of my corps that were not actually in line were ready, if needed, to follow up the movement of the two detached brigades. Col. Aslow put his regiment, then detached for skirmish duty, into advance of all others. He and his adjutant said that I (probably thinking him, Aslow, to be either Gen. Kirby or Col. Nodine) gave him direct orders, but Col. Nodine was ready with support. Col. Gray's Forty-ninth Ohio infantry stood close behind the right of the Fifteenth Ohio.

The situation is now easily sketched. Before the action I rode down the slopes from my night bivouac, having with me three or four members of my staff, till I came to one of those works which I came to protect four cannon of our heaviest caliber. The work being in the edge of a wood was made first of large logs, leaving apertures (embrasures) for the cannon's fire, then the dirt was dug up inside and thrown over the logs, making a good, wide, continuous, lastly short blocks were put crosswise on the work, and a series of huge logs stretched from block to block. This last contrivance was intended to protect the heads of the men who, with rifles in hand, were "supporting" the cannon. Along the work here and there, a tree of considerable size was left standing.

Our cannon fire had been before I arrived, shelling the Bald Hill and the fences of trees, and replying to the lively confederate batteries. The lat-was as unique as Jackson's onset at Chancellorsville. Notice how those who were part of the movement speak. Col. Aslow says: "The signal four companies dashed forward in splendid style, and with such rapidity that the astonished enemy had hardly time to get off; we captured twenty or thirty in their works." It is as if he had charge to the six companies on his right, which struck for and cleared the troublesome woods. Aslow, gaining the crest, instantly gave his men the word "to fortify and hold the Knob," according to "Gen. Howard's instructions." "This he did under a most terrific fire from two or three batteries of the enemy, posted by their main line of works, from six or seven hundred yards distant."

Meanwhile the firing in the woods grew worse and worse, for the confederates had sent thicker the Fifteenth and Thirty-seventh Tennessee regiments. But the Forty-ninth Ohio, backing up, prevented a confederate recapture. "Our loss was the lieutenant of company A, wounded; Lieut. Donner, company E, severely wounded; nine enlisted men killed and forty-four wounded."

Lieut. Col. Gray, of the Forty-ninth Ohio, writes: "I executed my orders, changed the direction of my line and charged the position in working order, driving with the assistance of the Fifteenth Ohio, the enemy from it." "Our loss in this affair was one officer killed and thirteen enlisted men wounded."

Gen. Wood, the division commander, reports: "At noon of the following day the corps commander (Gen. Howard) arranged an attack of the first part of the First brigade (Kirby's) First division, and part of the First brigade (the Fifteenth and Forty-ninth Ohio) of my division. The Fifteenth Ohio dashed gallantly forward, carried the hill, which had been lost, and entrenched itself on a under a heavy fire of the enemy."

Kirby's division moved in conjunction and did not, but the rapidity of Aslow's gallant charge, led by Aslow, whose adjutant, then Lieut. Alexis Tope, has furnished me with detail, in which he bore no small part, outstripped Kirby's longer line, so that Gen. Stanley says: "Kirby's losses that day were not severe."

I thought of this glowing incident, small as it may seem in the recital, when you called for a "half hour's preliminary cannonade" and the signal agreed upon for a charge was given; all the men moved, some faster and some slower, right in the teeth of the whirlwind. "The instant I saw them cheering and sweeping up the last ascent I descended from the 'top log,' mounted my horse before my staff could get to me, and followed immediately by but one cavalry galloped into the midst of these foremost men and was with them, amid tremendous cheering, while the air was got with the missiles of death; they had crowned the height; they had recovered the lost ground; they had destroyed the continuity of Sherman's line, and for once I, their corps commander, fully shared their feeling of enterprise, of danger, of ultimate security, and of glory."

I was closer beset at Fair Oaks, having had my brother Charles, near me, badly wounded, my three horses shot, and my right arm shattered by two painful wounds; yet no adventure had ever thrilled me like that spirited charge of Nodine's Ohio men, when we recaptured that Bald Knob along the lines of Muddy Creek, and, with Gen. Kirby's help, held it fast in sight of the twin mountains of Georgia, June 21, 1864.

Every link of a chain must be tough to make the whole chain strong. The link Kirby commanded was an important link in the chain of battles that made "Atlanta ours and fairly won."

Henry M. Stanton, secretary of war, blamed me concerning a like personal exposure which occurred at Garden's Corner, S. C., where with one aid, Col. Beebe, I reconnoitered what appeared to be swampy and slippery ground in front of a broad confederate intrenchment before ordering a charge. We were several times fired at from the crest of the work. Mr. Stanton said: "General, for that reckless exposure you ought to have been cashiered!" Beebe and I were saved a hundred other lives, and surely we were not brought before even a court of inquiry.

To keep soldiers in heart and gain their continued confidence and affection the commandant, whatever be his rank, must make them understand that he calls them to meet no hardship, exposure or danger that he is not willing and ready to share with them. If he so loves them they will in time guard him with their own bodies and hold his life sacred.

How to Make Farming Pay.

The drive between Plymouth and Center Harbor is set down as a notable one, but take care to make it from Center Harbor to Plymouth, instead of the reverse, otherwise you will have the high mountains behind you, and will not see them as you go. A certain bridge was down, and we were forced to go round by Ashland, thus extending the already long drive to something like twenty miles. "There's some folks that make farming pay," said my driver, pointing to a place we passed.

"How?" I demanded, thinking to hear of some new plan.

"They work," he replied. "The remark was intended as a sting at 'lazy farmers,' of whom, rightly or wrongly, one hears much.—William Henry Bishop, in Century.

Wined for Kissing in Public.

An old law of Paris forbids kissing in public places. A cabman who saw his wife only once a week gave her his weekly kiss in front of a restaurant the other day. Both were arrested. The cabman was fined five dollars. He gallantly paid the fine, remarking that the kiss was worth it.

WHEN "SCAB" DATES FROM.

The word has been in use since the Year 1809.

The first time the word "scab" is known to have been used in its present sense by union men was in 1863. Although in 1857 several shipbuilders struck at Medford, Mass., for a continuous run supply, not till 1863 did strikes become frequent. Thirteen hundred persons were idle at Fall River for six months in 1859.

The railroad strike of 1896, which began at St. Louis May 5, will long be remembered for its magnitude. A union man had been discharged by the Missouri Pacific road, and the mechanics and shopmen struck. This was the seminal cause. Texas, Louisiana, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas were largely affected, and governors of these states issued proclamations.

Preceding this came the memorable strike of 1877 with its immense destruction of life and property. The four great New York trunk lines were in the hands of the strikers from first to last. The riots of Chicago and St. Louis were the work of tramps.

AFFAIRS RELIGIOUS.

The Unitarian church claims its origin in Venice in 1546.

The total annuity to the Presbyterian church are 74,791.

The total receipts of the American board for ten months are $300,032.

There are to-day ninety-nine translations of the Bible and two hundred and thirty partial ones.

The new mission house of the Home and Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian church in New York city will be twelve and a half stories high, occupy an area of thirty-two by one hundred and ninety feet, and will cost about $750,000.

This feat of arms, grand and exciting as it was to me, was preliminary to my own adventure, concerning which I am writing you.

In my corps in Stanley's division we had a very brave, handsome, prepossessing young brigade commander, Gen. Kirby. Stanley had great confidence in him and his command, but, unfortunately, the afternoon of the 30th of June, as Sherman was pressing Johnston all along the front, as usual, and also trying to turn his flank a confederate force, coming with lightning velocity, made a tremendous demonstration against my foremost divisions, and Kirby's brigade was knocked out of position. An open space fringed with woods was taken from him, confederate cannon put behind epaulements in the best places and long lines of intrenchments speedily dug and filled with graycoats in and out of the woods. We called the highest point of this ground which Kirby lost "Bald Knob."

The night of the 31st of June was a sorry one in our camp. The recent grand success of Baird's division and Harrier's brigade were all forgotten.

DR. SCHAEFER, of Vienna, has applied photography to the study of the human skin. A bright light is projected on the part of the skin to be examined, and by direct exposure many small details of the skin, including marbles, not usually discernible, are photographed.

THEIR STAN IN LIFE.

MARTIN VAN BUREN began life as an office boy for a lawyer, rising slowly to the position of clerk, copyist and finally becoming a pleader in the courts of justice of the people.

BERNARDOTTE, one of Napoleon's marshals, who afterwards became king of Sweden, was educated in the office of a country notary, and spent his time in copying legal papers.

SOUTHERN, the poet, spent most of his boyhood in his father's linen shop. He wrote verses in the intervals of business and kept his papers hidden away in the folds of his coat.

WEST, the painter, showed his talent at a very early age. He made sketches in charcoal before he was ten, and some of his early work displays great ease in the use of the crayon.

JOHN HOWARD showed in boyhood the philanthropic traits that afterwards made his name famous. He was continually on the look-out for some case of distress that he might relieve.

WOLFEY's early life is said to have been passed mainly in the slaughter house of his father, who was a butcher. He was sometimes called by his enemies "The Butcher's Dog."

MASTERS IN ART.

ALLOU's "Judith" is the portrait of his mistress. The head of Holofernes is a portrait of the artist himself.

CARACCI was the father of the pathetic Italian school. The Ecco Adonis and Mater Dolens date from that time.

HOGARTH was an engraver, and before turning his attention to art, made his living by engraving coats of arms.

GIOTTO was a shepherd boy, and began his artistic career by sketching with a piece of chalk on a piece of slate.

BRENGEL was the first artist to give attention to the different phases of peasant life and represents them on canvas.

LOHMEIER was left an orphan at the age of twelve, and was cared for by his brother, who instructed him in wood engraving.

BOSCH painted so much after the manner of "Flint" that many works proved to be his were long credited to the latter.

FRANCIA did not begin painting until nearly sixty years of age, and in ten years executed a long series of admirable works.

CRANACH is known as the friend of Luther. Several pictures of the great reformer, painted by this master, are still in existence.

Admiral's Sacrifices.

"The most savage and horrible of all the barbarous customs of the Aztecs in Mexico," says Prof. W. C. Steadman, of Washington, "is that of celebrating the death of a king or great noble by a sacrifice of their own lives; indeed, all of their anniversary rites are attended by a holocaust of human beings. They believe that when a king or a noble dies he must have wives and slaves in the next world, just as he had them in this one, and that they may not be wanting, the simple expedient is resorted to of killing his wives and slaves and sending them after him. Rude and bloody ceremonies mark the practice of this custom, which are continued for about a week. Strange to say, numerous volunteers are always found who are not only ready, but anxious, to be offered up in honor of a dead king."

Ginseng in China.

Ginseng is an important article of export to China, and the trade is largely in the hands of the resident Chinese themselves. They buy the root of wholesale dealers, who get it of country folk at about two dollars and fifty cents a pound. Chinamen seldom buy directly from the countrymen, because the latter being unacquainted with the Celestials are unwilling to send the root to C. O. D. The Chinese make a mystery of the trade, but they send about yearly many thousands of dollars' worth of ginseng.

REASON AND UNREASON.

ANYHOW, a man discovers that he cannot reform himself he begins on the world.

YET, a married couple always have a hammock hanging up in their yard which they never use.

A MAN never grows more eloquent about hard times than when he talks about them to his wife.

WIVES are men, being to tell a woman all his troubles and grievances, that is his way of showing that he cares for her.

Letter to the Jamestown (N. Y.) Sun.

"Dust, Chautauque Co., N. Y., July 19, 1893.

Editor Sun:—I consider it a duty to make the following statement. One year ago last April I became afflicted with kidney disease. I employed one of the most experienced physicians of this section of the country. I frequently rode to his office, braced up in my carriage with pillows. I obtained no permanent relief. I was Reduced to a mere Skeleton.

My father, Jacob Johnson, of Elletts, died of the same disease three years ago, and I began to think there was little hope for me. Some time in Aug. Dr. M. H. Francis of Fredonia, N. Y., called on me while making his canvass for the state senate. Learning of my condition he said he made a remedy for and that he would send me some. His Kidney and Backache Cure helped me from the start. My digestion improved, the soreness left my sides and back, and I took on healthy muscle and flesh.

When I had finished the first bottle I was cured. I took a little of the second and then gave the balance to an afflicted neighbor.

I have not met Dr. Francis since, but I can not say enough in praise of his Kidney and Backache Cure. Yours truly, TELMAN H. JOHNSON.

THE HERALD

SPENCER COOPER, : : : : Editor.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.

THURSDAY, November 8, 1894.

"Politics is h—ll," as Jim Jewell has said, but it might have been worse, is some consolation.

All the Democrats in the county were elected but our candidate for county judge, whom Judge Carson defeated by a majority of 104.

The "kangaroo ballot" is a good screen behind which to turn a trick, judging from the results of Tuesday's election, and the "awapping" done by somebody on that occasion would put to shame anything of the kind ever attempted.

Do we accept the situation? Of course we do, and very much after the man who, being asked if his son was willing to die, replied: "Willin' or no willin' he had her to cut." But we have no individual regrets. We only regret that the party lost.

The returns bear us out in one thing, at least. We said the Republicans had out their best men, and we believe the rank and file in that party will agree with us that no two Republicans in the county could have polled the vote accorded Judge Carson and Mr. Wilson on Tuesday last.

The news reached here Wednesday evening that W. C. Owens, Democratic candidate for congress from the 7th district, was defeated by Judge Denny, the Republican nominee, by about 800 majority. If this be so it is the result of the vituperative abuse heaped upon Mr. Breckinridge and his supporters in the recent primary, and therefore it does not come in the nature of a surprise.

THE HERALD, having made the fight for the party nominee and lost, now stands ready to support Judge Carson in "every good word and work," and we feel already that we shall find much in his official career to commend, sincerely believing that he will make Wolfe county a very acceptable presiding officer. His experience as judge and sheriff, respectively, years ago, eminently qualify him for the duties he will be called upon to assume in January, and we believe he will give us a clean administration of county affairs.

The tax having failed to carry in Morgan county on Tuesday, Mr. Broas should now turn his attention to our route, and see what can be effected in the way of donations, etc. We believe he can secure proper inducements to come our way if he will only make the effort, and we are also inclined to the opinion that he can run a road from Rothwell to Caney for much less than his corps of engineers formerly estimated. To determine this a new survey might have to be made, but the cost would only be nominal, considering the many other advantages. A half dozen cheaper routes than the one his surveyors chose can be found, any of which are equally as practical, and when he looks into the matter we believe he will be most thoroughly convinced that the route by way of Hazel Green is the one he should take under any and all circumstances. Let us hear from you, Mr. Broas.

The indications now are that the Democrats have elected a Congressman from each of the eleven districts, with the possible exception of the Seventh, in which Denny has probably defeated Owens, as elsewhere mentioned in this paper. In this district Kendall and Beckner are undoubtedly elected by safe, though small, majorities. In this county Kendall received 176 majority, Monfese gives him 150 and Powell shows up with her usual majority of 50. As Breathitt put every Democrat in by a handsome majority, she undoubtedly gave the congressional nominees a good vote. Montgomery, Elliott, Estill, Floyd and Pike have likewise done their Democratic duty, and Clark will prove the banner county, while Morgan, Kendall's native county, has certainly furnished her quota. Preserving our estimates as facts, the Republican counties could not overcome them. Anyhow we will continue to hope, and in our next give the result.

This bird got a touch of chicken cholera Tuesday, and he has since been unable to stand up and crow. While he is a "sick chicken," just now he will recover in time, and his clarion notes yet be heard in the land.

Knows a Good Thing When He Sees It. Canoe Fork, Breathitt County, Ky., October 31st, 1894.

Mr. Cooper—My dear friend:—We take this method of thanking you for past favors. You have performed an excellent job on our minutes. They are printed on nice clean white paper, with very readable type, and bound in beautiful tinted paper in good style. The entire job gives perfect satisfaction. We sincerely thank you for same.

You will find enclosed forty cents in stamps to pay postage on our minutes, as per your request.

Again we will ask you to accept our thanks for the nice work you have done for us. We also wish you to do our printing hereafter. From yours,

Very respectfully,
REV. JOHN F. ARROWOOD.

A Policeman's Home. The Virginia state building at the World's fair, which was a reproduction of George Washington's Mt. Vernon mansion, was purchased and is now occupied as a residence by a Chicago policeman named McGuire. The house, which cost $17,000, was bought by McGuire for $400, and moved to a lot on Stony Island avenue, three miles away, and now a Chicago policeman sleeps in a reproduction of the bedchamber of the father of his country. The officer furnished the house with furniture molested after that at Mt. Vernon.

Danger From Catarrh. The most important feature about that very common complaint, catarrh in the head, is its tendency to develop into some other more serious and dangerous disease. The foul matter dropping from the head into the bronchial tubes or lungs is very liable to lead to bronchitis or consumption, that destroyer which causes more deaths in this country than any other disease. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do but little good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla. The powerful action of this medicine upon the blood expels every impurity, and by so doing cures catarrh and gives health to the entire organism.

A SERIOUS CHARGE

Contrasts Mr. Baum, the Mayor of Mt. Sterling.

We copy the following from the Mt. Sterling Daily News of the 5th inst: Last night, just after the people from the various churches had gone to their homes, Mayor Adam Baum came out of the post office and turned up Broadway toward his home on High street. As he turned the corner of Main and Broadway, Henry Watson, councilman from the second ward, who was standing on the corner, called him and asked him what he meant by the way he had treated his little daughter.

Mr. Baum answered that he had done nothing wrong. Watson told him he was going to whip him or get whipped, and with a hickory cane about three-fourths of an inch in diameter began beating Mr. Baum over the head, knocking him down four times. Mr. Baum had a penitentiary cane and struck Watson two or three times, but did not hurt him. Watson was arrested and held over on $500 bond till Friday.

WATSON'S STATEMENT

A News reporter called on Mr. Watson this morning and asked him for a statement, which he readily gave. He said: I believe it was on the 21st day of last month, I was in Cincinnati, when I received a telegram from my wife to come home, which I did at once, thinking my baby was worse, as it was sick when I left. On returning home I found my wife greatly troubled about what my little girl, Minnie Belle, aged ten years, had told her. The child said: "Mamma sent me to Mr. Baum's for some groceries, and I asked Mr. Baum for a box for my white rabbit. He took me back into a little room away from the grocery, picked out a box and asked me if that would do, and I said yes. Then he put one arm around me and put his other hand under my clothes and felt all over me. I broke away from him and went home and told my mother, and when the groceries came she sent them right back."

The child still sticks to her story, and no argument will induce her to say she is wrong. Mr. Watson says he did not want to get harshly in the matter and waited, thinking something might turn up to clear Mr. Baum of the terrible charge, and is sure Mr. Baum is guilty, or he would not have resorted to the measure he did.

MR. BAUM'S STATEMENT.

The news man found Mr. Baum in bed at his residence on High street. He is severely bruised about the head and is suffering considerably. Mr. Baum says: The story that I took improper liberties with the child is without foundation. The day the little girl was in my store my son Will and my clerk, Mr. Bardman, were there. She asked me for a box and I told her to come into the next room where we kept empty boxes and pick out one. As we came out of the room, in the presence of Will and Mr. Bardman, I put my arm around her. I had not the remotest idea of doing her any harm. She left the store in a perfectly good humor. Last night I was standing in the post office when Mr. Watson came in and went to his box. I believe I spoke to him as he came in. After I got my mail I started for home, little dreaming that I was to be attacked. When I passed the corner I said "good evening, gentlemen," and when Watson called me I little dreamed that he was going to attack me. I am innocent of doing any wrong.

The above is both sides of the affair. We take no sides in the matter, as we are not judge or jury. But, if Mr. Baum is guilty of the charge, he should step down and out as Mayor of this city, and if he is not, Mr. Watson should be punished for assault and battery to the full extent of the law.

Politics and Death.

At Hopewell, Greenup county, Ky., on the 2nd inst., James Haney shot and killed Thomas Floyd and seriously injured Oliver Floyd, a brother. The trouble came up over politics, and was started at a public speaking. While at Hopewell the Floyd boys abused Haney, and when followed up he turned and put a bullet through the abdomen of Tom Floyd and one in the arm of his brother Oliver. Haney was arrested. Both parties are well known and respected farmers in the neighborhood of Hopewell.

DANCING AND DANCES.

GALLINI, in his "Travels in Africa," declares that the people of the west coast are exceedingly fond of dancing. He once tried to live among them, but as long as he could raise his hand to his violin they continued to dance, and he was forced to desist.

One of the most famous early ballet dancers was Marie Maki, who, being ruined by law's financial schemes, dressed herself in her finest robes and committed suicide publicly by jumping off a Seine bridge at noon in the presence of thousands of people.

Maria Taglioretti, the danseuse, was the daughter of an Italian ballet master. She was born in 1804, went on the stage in 1822 and continued her appearances in public until 1847, when she retired. Her greatest successes were in La Bayadere, La Sylphide and La Fille du Danube.

Mink's ballet, "Mephistophela," displays "Faust" tempted by a female Mephistopheles, who exhibits to her victim the most celebrated female dances of antiquity, including "Salsome," the daughter of "Herosides," while David is represented as doing a pas seul before the ark.

The ballet d'action is said to have been revived from ancient models by the famous Duchesse du Maine, who took a well-known play, had music written for it, and set the characters to act it through from beginning to end without speaking a word. It was extremely popular, and so established a fashion.

Russia proposes to connect the Baltic with the Black sea, according to recent report. The rivers Danube and Dnieper are to be joined by a canal; surveying has begun at both ends of the route, and Cherson is spoken of as the harbor for the canal on the Black sea.

Newspapers in Russia were forbidden some time ago to make any reference to the dresses worn by the empress on state occasions. This was done because one paper by mistake reported her as wearing a dress which at that time was completely out of fashion.

A CATHERINER in the course of a month will devour six thousand times its own weight in food. It will take a man three months before he can eat an amount of food equal to his own weight.

ABOUT THE WOMEN.

ROSA BONHEUR was a dressmaker's apprentice when she was a girl of fifteen years.

Mrs. JULIA J. IRVINE, the new president of Wellesley college, is a sister of Buffalo Bill.

MISS HALFOUR, sister of the English conservative leader, is now traveling in Africa, and at last advises was the guest of Mr. Cecil Rhodes at Cape Town.

QUETTE TYLER, who is to have been Mrs. Gould, is in Richmond, Va., and will soon sail for Europe. She is writing a novel of Virginia life, entitled "Eosa, the Virginian."

THE WHY OF IT.

SNOW is sometimes of a red color, because of the presence of a minute vegetable cell, the Proteus nivalis, which secretes a red coloring matter.

A MATCH ignites because of the heat generated by friction. Matches are tipped with phosphorus and sulphur, both highly inflammable substances.

A PLUMB line by the side of a very large building inclines a little from the perpendicular because the weight is attracted by the mass of the edifice.

FLIES can walk on the ceiling because their feet are natural air pumps, and form a vacuum so that the body is supported by atmospheric pressure.

SEA shells murmur because the vibrations of the air, not otherwise observable, are collected in the shell and by its shape are brought to a focus.

A WINDOW in a glass filled with hot water prevents the breaking of the glass because the metal readily absorbs a large part of the heat of the water.

MANY springs are intermittent, probably because the channels leading from the reservoirs to the surface are crooked and constitute natural siphons.

RAIN rusts more rapidly when wet than when dry because it has, or seems to have, a greater affinity for oxygen when the latter is combined with hydrogen.

A BLACK down grows under the feathers of many birds at the approach of winter because down is the best non-conductor and black the warmest color.

A New Geographical Apparatus. The marine globe is a new physical instrument to produce currents similar to sea currents. It consists of a glass globe under the interior of which are constructed the massive outline of continents and the hollows of sea basins. The bottom of the sea is formed of an interior sphere, concentric with the one of glass, moving on a vertical axis, and is worked by a gear.

The sea basins are filled with water containing particles of stearine in suspension, which render all its movements visible. The exterior of the apparatus does not differ much from that of a geographical globe, and its merit is that it tends directly to facilitate the study of geography, so far as the sea currents are concerned.

HAD HIS OWN WAY AT LAST.

But It Required a Mustet with Fixed Bayonet Even Then.

Here is an incident of the Peekskill camp which shows that at least one brave soldier boy was on duty there. Among the excursionists to the camp on the Fourth was the wife of a private in one of the separate companies. Her husband was in the guard detail for the day and had been posted as a sentry guarding a portion of the camp where visitors are not allowed.

The wife after searching vainly for him in his company street, at last discovered him at his post. She ran gladly to greet him, but stopped in dismay before a leveled bayonet.

"Halt! Who is there?" sternly challenged the sentry.

"Why, John, don't you know me?" asked the wife in dismay.

"You can't come any nearer." The wife moved a step. "Halt! Corporal of the guard, post 7," he shouted.

The corporal ran from the guard tent to find the wife confronted by her sentinel husband. All three were from the same town and the corporal knew the couple well.

"Sentry, what is the matter? That's your wife," he said, in astonishment. "I know it," said John, with a wail; "but I haven't had my own way since we were married, and I thought I would have it now."

The sentry was soon relieved from duty, and bought ice cream at the restaurant to atone for his cruelty.—Yonkers Statesman.

Not So Glad a Shot.

Rulers have always been flattered, from Canute's time downward, by being it would seem, an unwritten law that a monarch's weak points should pass unrecognition. Napoleon III. once said, in counseling a friend who chafed to be shooting with him for his poor marksmanship:

"You need not fret about it; the emperor by which he meant his uncle, the great Napoleon I) was even a worse shot than you are; the only time they put a gun in his hand, he killed a poor hound, and went away thinking he had killed a stag."

"In those days the stag, wherever brought to bay, was left for the emperor to kill. One day, however, the emperor was not to be found, and the master of the stag hounds finished the animal with his knife. Just then the emperor came in sight.

They hurriedly got the dead stag on his legs, propped it up with branches, and so forth, and handed the emperor the earlobe of honor," as it is called. The emperor fired, and of course the stag tumbled over, but at the same time there was a piteous whine from one of the hounds, which had been shot through the head.

"The emperor wheeled round, unconscious of the mischief he had done, saying to one of his aides-de-camp: 'After all, I am not as bad a shot as they pretend!'"—Youth's Companion.

W. A. McGuire, a well-known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colic or grip as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results, and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having lagrippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit, and then concluded to try the children's medicine, and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and

FERRETS AND FERRETING.

How the Little Animals Are Handled Where They Are Made to Work.

In England ferrets are more for work than as pets and are used for making rabbits bolt from their burrows. To do this scarcely any training is necessary; the three young ferrets which we used the other day worked as well as their more experienced parents. There are various reasons why white ferrets are to be preferred as opposed to the brown polecat variety. They are usually more docile and pleasant to handle. A brown ferret is apt to be nipped up by a sharp dog in mistake for a rat or rabbit, while a white one is always apparent, even when moving among the densest herbage. This specially applies to night time, and lance poachers invariably use white ferrets. Gamekeepers who know their business prefer ferrets taken from poachers to any others. The poacher carefully selects his ferrets, and from the nature of his trade he cannot afford to work bad ones. Some ferrets chase rabbits to bolt rapidly, while others are slow.

Sometimes a ferret will drive a rabbit to the end of a blind burrow, and after killing it will not return until it has gorged itself with blood and the trouble is added if the ferret curls itself up for an after-dinner sleep. Then, of course, it has either to be left or dug out; if the former, it is well to bar every exit and return with a dead rabbit when hunger has succeeded the gorged sleep. Ferreting is mostly practiced in winter; and it is to guard against such occasions as these that working ferrets are generally muzzled. A cruel practice used to obtain of stitching together the lips of the ferrets to prevent their worrying rabbits and then "laying up." But the most humane method of muzzling is with a soft string, a muzzle constructed of which may be quite effective and at the same time not uncomfortable to wear. Care must be taken not to hurt the ferret, as if the string annoys him he will endeavor to do nothing but get it off. Occasionally ferrets are worked with a line attached, but this is an objectionable practice. There may be a root or stick in which the line may get entangled, when there will be digging and no end of trouble in getting at it.

SEEDS SOWN WITH ARTILLERY.

How Gunpowder Helped to Plant Trees on a Rocky Soil.

Alexander Nasmith, the landscape painter, was a man fruitful in expedients. To his mind the fact that a thing could not be done in the ordinary manner was no reason why it should be given up. His son relates the following interesting example of his ingenuity.

The duke of Athol consulted him as to some improvements which he desired to make in his woodland scenery near Dunkeld. Among other things, a certain rocky crag needed to be planted with trees, to relieve the grim barrenness of its appearance. The question was how to do it, as it was impossible for any man to climb the crag, in order to set seeds or plants in the clefts of the rock.

A happy idea struck my father. Having observed in front of the castle a pair of small cannon, used for firing salutes on great days, it occurred to him to turn them to account. A tinsmith in the village was ordered to make a number of canisters with covers. The canisters were filled with all sorts of suitable tree seeds. The cannon was loaded and the canisters were fired up against the high face of the rock. They burst and scattered the seeds in all directions. Some years afterwards, when my father revisited the place, he was delighted to find that his scheme of planting by artillery had been successful; the trees were flourishing in all the recesses of the cliffs.

WAYS OF THE POMPAHO.

He Is a Frisky Jumper, as Well as Delicately Flavored.

One of the most delicious food fishes of the semi-tropics is the pompano. In size and shape he is not unlike the flounder of the northern waters, but, unlike the flounder, he swims edge-wise instead of flat on his belly. In color his scales are gray, white, grayish blue and golden yellow, and when he leaps from the water, as he frequently does, the glinting of the golden scales in the sunlight forms a beautiful sight. A traveler just returned from Lake Worth, on the lower east coast of Florida, writes to the New York Herald: "As we approached the mouth of the canal the fish appeared to be more numerous, and they made long jumps into the air all about us. They were chiefly mullet and pompano, and once I counted five in the air at the same time."

"Before we reached the dredge boat, six miles from the foot of the lake, we had four pompano, all of which had jumped from the water and landed accidentally in the bottom of our boat. One of them struck our boatman, Ben Able, in the breast, and the blow was of sufficient force to nearly wind him for a minute. Since ice factories have been established along the Indian river and on Lake Worth, pompano are shipped to the northern markets in large quantities. They 'run' through out the year, but make the best eating during the winter months."

You can relieve that headache you have by buying a box of Mergeline at THE HERALD office. It will only cost 50 cents and is sold on a positive guarantee.

YOUNG BUT A WISE OBSERVER.

What a Little French Girl Saw at a Ball to Amuse Her.

The little French girl stood at my elbow while I wrote. She was leaning on the window sill, one little hand supporting her black head, says a writer in the New York Advertiser. Far across the lawn she could hear the rise and fall of music and the sound of laughter and of tripping feet. Red and pink lanterns swung from the balconies in the night breeze. I was very lonely. It was so complimentary to the little French girl, but the little French girl did not care for dancing and I did. Suddenly she gave a little laugh.

"Why are you giggling?" I asked rather crossly.

"Because the world amuses me," she murmured.

A very good reason, to be sure. But when the world amused me I never laughed. Pathetic is more than clever for ten years, and more bizarre in her notions than clever, so I asked: "Why does it amuse you?"

"Well, for example, is it not better to dance, to dance always one way around, with no aim to get nowhere, only to go round, to twirl?"

"Yes, very stupid."

"Just as it is not better to stay up till twelve when one's bed is ready at eight and one's eyes sleep?" And it is not stupid to wear a décolleté gown and long gloves when one's arms are prettier than one's neck? The world, 'amuse!' And she laughed softly to herself, and I could not help thinking what she said was true; and I no longer envied the merry-makers, but thought anyone would envy me my solitude, a deus and my intellectual companion. Some moods need only a straw to balance them.

TWO SIDES TO THE QUESTION.

In Fitting Spectacles Bows to the Ears Both Must Be Considered.

Having selected a pair of frames with a nose piece of the right height and spread to bring the glasses into the proper position, and having had them fitted with glasses made in accordance with the oculist's prescription, the optician now proceeds to fit the completed spectacles to your head, says the New York Sun. You might put them right on and wear them off just as they are.

But no, he reaches over and places the bows over your ears himself. Then he tries the spectacles gently, as they rest upon your nose, taking hold at the outer ends of the frame, where the bows hinge. Not just right. He takes them off again and smooths the bows out between the tips of his fingers and changes their shape a little and tries them again. Better, but not just right yet. He takes them again, and smooths out and bends in a little more. You observe as he hands them to you, as he does this time, that the bows have not only been changed somewhat in shape, but now they vary in sweep and curve. You put them on and find that they fit perfectly and very comfortably. He touches them and finds them right and says so.

"But the bows are not alike," you say.

"No," says the optician, "but they are now made to fit. Your ears are not just alike. One of them is a little higher than the other, and they are not placed exactly alike on the head."

"What?" you say, and he says: "Yes. There are very few of us that are perfect or just alike on both sides."

Bursting the Bag.

"One form of amusement that children have now that they didn't use to have when I was a boy," said Mr. Hoyle, "is the fun of bursting the bag. Nowadays many things come from the grocer and elsewhere in paper bags, and let me bust the bag is a familiar household word. The younger generation takes the empty bag and with his thumb and forefinger around the open end of it he forms a neck with an opening through which he may inflate it. Then with a sudden whack he brings the bag down upon the other hand and explodes it with a report whose loudness is determined by the size of the bag, the fullness of its inflation, the tightness of the grip around its closed neck, and the force of the blow. The modern small boy ought to be grateful for this continuous domestic Fourth of July, one of many privileges that he enjoys that were quite unknown to his fathers."
